

In Development for NBC

Here are descriptions of shows that, at this writing, are already in production or pre-production, or have stars attached that merit inclusion.

Untitled Emily Spivey Comedy: Christina Applegate stars in an irreverent look at parenthood through the POV of an acerbic working mother, who never thought she'd be a mom. Also in the mix is her stay-at-home husband and opinionated parents. From NBC Studios and Lorne Michaels. Applegate and Lorne Michaels (a powerful player at NBC) give this comedy a high probability of getting on the schedule. (Score = 5)

My Life As An Experiment: Based on the best-selling book by journalist/author A.J. Jacobs, Guinea Pig Diaries: My Life As An Experiment. The comedy centers on magazine immersion journalist A.J. Wilder (Jon Dore), who explores all sorts of unique experiences. Paget Brewster (Criminal Minds) plays A.J.'s wife Stacie. Donald Sutherland will play Stacie's dad and A.J.'s father-in-law, a highly respected, very accomplished heart surgeon and a pompous, arrogant guy to boot who makes no secret of his disdain for his writer son-in-law. From Sony, Reveille, and Jack Black's Electric Dynamite. There's quite a bit of buzz surrounding this project. (Score = 5)

Free Agents: Another attempt to adapt a British series for American sensibilities. The romantic comedy explores the attraction between two quirky PR executives working together, who also both happen to be on the rebound, one from divorce and the other from the death of her fiancé. Hank Azaria stars. Buffy the Vampire Slayer alum Anthony Head will guest star in the pilot, reprising his role from the original British version. (Score = 4)
